PROJECT DIRECTOR • FACILITATOR

Sarah Lyman is a Project Director and Facilitator Instructor for The Pacific Institute. Since 1998, she has been heavily involved in implementing and facilitating the Imagine 21™ and Thought Patterns for a Successful Career™ programs for the Oregon National Guard. In addition to facilitating these seminars, she was one of three volunteers who created and applied the implementation plan that is currently being used to deliver the curriculum to soldiers and spouses of the Oregon Army and Air National Guard.

Sarah has also been involved with facilitator training and mentoring a group of 20 National Guardsmen who facilitate the education to the Oregon National Guard. In 1999, Major General Alexander Burgin, The Adjutant General of Oregon, presented Sarah with the Oregon National Guard Meritorious Service Award for her efforts.

After completing an Associate Degree in Business and Computer Operations, she worked for several organizations in management and accounting, as well as providing private consulting for small businesses. In addition to the National Guard, Sarah is working to develop education plans for 21 Keys for High Performance Teaching and Learning™.

Sarah currently resides in Corvallis, Oregon, but has national and international travel experience having lived all over the United States, as well as Peru and France. Preferring the Pacific Northwest and loving the outdoors, Sarah has also worked for the Forest Service as a member of the first all-woman trail crew and later as a Packer for the wilderness trail maintenance division. Over the last 25 years, she has been successful breeding, training and showing Arabian horses and owns and manages a boarding facility in Corvallis.

Sarah's greatest strength is her knowledge of the education. She leads by her personal successes. Her experience has given her skills to facilitate to large groups with diverse educational backgrounds, and her professionalism and sense of humor add tremendous depth to her programs.
