

Kimberly M c O M B E R

PROJECT DIRECTOR • FACILITATOR

In 2000, after experiencing The Pacific Institute's curriculum and seeing its positive impact on organizational performance, Kimberly McOmber made a career commitment to the Institute. It was an impact she experienced personally.

"It's one thing to have an understanding of the psychology behind the concepts. It is quite another to see the power and impact putting the concepts into action can have in your own life. It blew me away."

Prior to joining The Pacific Institute, Kimberly had a successful residential real estate career that has provided specific insights into the issues facing sales organizations. This experience has provided her with a platform from which to help organizations understand how a constructive culture can positively impact organizational performance and associate satisfaction. She combines these insights into individual change management and organizational strategies to provide a strong value proposition for clients.

Kimberly's background is in education with a BS from Miami University (Ohio). Her natural people skills, and her ability to discover the root causes in situations which others may not see, enable her to bring the Institute's curriculum alive for clients. Clients are often heard to remark, "Why didn't I see that?" at her insights and look to Kimberly to help them in coaching situations.

"Once we are able to break through our often self-imposed limitations, organizations and individuals can focus on positive change and realize a high return on their time spent on individual development."

A certified facilitator for The Pacific Institute's curricula, Kimberly also is a trained facilitator of the Institute's organizational culture and evaluation programs. These provide her with the "higher viewpoint" – so valuable in helping individuals and organizations to take performance and results to that next level.
